

Looking to stretch your brain? Come to

Minneapolis, MN ♦ July 12-14, 2019

Narrativity is a convention for writers. And readers. And process geeks. And people who like figuring out how other people's brains work. We want there to be better stories, and we want YOU to be part of making that happen!

Narrativity offers a single track of programming, so ideas can carry through from one panel to the next and the conversation continues all weekend. We love spirited discussions, and digging deep into challenging subjects, and bad jokes, and good friends (including the ones we haven't met yet). We want to share ideas with people who do things differently, who have different perspectives and come from different starting places, because we firmly believe that a free and friendly exchange of ideas makes all of us richer.

Our host hotel is the Crowne Plaza Minneapolis West in Plymouth, MN. Our website, where you can find more information, register on-line, and participate in programming planning, is <https://www.narrativity.fun>. And our goal is the best little convention a bunch of story lovers can build, together!
